NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"The Massacre of Glencoe, a historical tale by G. W. M. Reynolds, author of 'Rye-House Plot,' and other popular works, is a historical rumance founded on the incidents of William of Orange's horrible, rathless massacre of a whole clan of gallant Highlanders, whose only crime was their loyalty to King James, their lawful and children, without distinction, whose distinction, without distinction.

horrible, rathless massacre of a whole claim of galant ringulances, whose only ortime was their loyalty to King James, their lawful and beloved monarch. Men, women and children, without distinction, were shot down, or pertaked by fire, or by exposure to the weather, to the number of thirty thousand, it is a thrilling tale, that cannot fall to interest while it instructs the reader, as it throws light on one of the most eventful epochs of Scotch history. [Flahkill Standard. "The Massacre of Glencoe relates to an exciting period and event. The Massacre of Glencoe will stand forever as the foulest blot on the character of William III, and will call for detestation from all who read its account."

The Massacre of Glencoe by G. W. M. Reynolds, author of 'The Rye Heuse Flot, 'The Court of London, 'Kenneth,' and many other romances, in which the legends of Scotland are delineated with great power and fidelity. The work before us relates to the ruthless massacre of a whole clan of gallant Highlanders, by order of the Prince of Orange, afterward William III of England, on account of their adherence to the cause of James II; and being connected with ene of the most eventful epochs of Scotch history, is intensely interesting.

This historical novel, based on incidents in the life and times of William of Orange, and particularly to his horrible, rathless massacre has been also believed to the low of the life and times of William of Orange, and particularly to his horrible, rathless massacre.

William of Orange, and particularly to his horrible, rathless masses are of a whole clan of gailant Highlanders and their families, to the umber of thirty thousand." [Dollar Newspaper.]
